

Who We Are

Canadian Organic Growers Inc. (COG) is Canada's only national membership-based education and networking organization representing farmers, gardeners, consumers and supporters in all provinces and territories who share a vision for a sustainable, bioregionally-based organic food system. The membership is diverse but the belief that organic food production is the best choice for our health, the environment, and our communities guides all of COG's members and the organization's work.

COG Perth-Waterloo-Wellington (PWW) is one of 11 regional COG chapters advocating for a local AND organic food system. The chapter works towards this goal by delivering workshops and offering support to farmers transitioning into organic agriculture and connecting consumers to local organic food.

Why Choose Local AND Organic

Local and organic are distinct food labels that deal with different aspects of the food chain – how our food gets to us and how it is grown, respectively. Together, they represent an opportunity to more fully address the problems with our food system and generate more benefits than either could do alone:

For our health

- increased consumption of fresh, whole foods consumed at their peak nutritional value
- food produced without genetically-modified organisms, synthetic pesticides, hormones and irradiation

For our environment

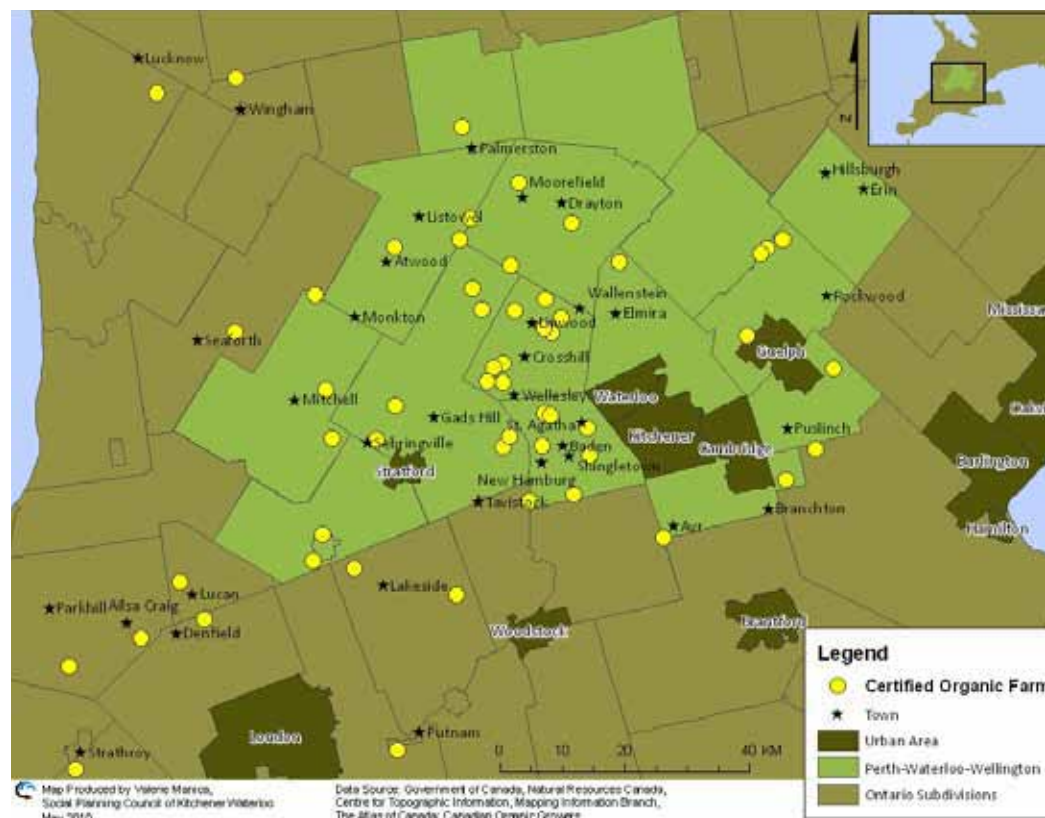

- decreased water pollution, greenhouse gases, soil degradation and erosion as a result of organic agricultural practices that eliminate artificial inputs and emphasize soil and agro-ecosystem health
- improved farm biodiversity and pollinator habitat

For our community

- strengthened local economies and urban-rural ties
- greater farmer sovereignty and prosperity
- safer working conditions for those who produce our food with the elimination of synthetic pesticides

Organic Farming in Perth-Waterloo-Wellington

Nearly 10,000 certified organic acres dot the countryside of Perth-Waterloo-Wellington. More than half of this land is in field crop production, for human and animal consumption. The north-west area of Waterloo Region hosts an above average number of organic farms, growing large quantities of organic produce in particular while Perth and Wellington counties focus production more on organic field crops, dairy and meat products. The most recent (2006) Agricultural Census reports that the PWW region makes up 10.4% of organic farms in the province.

Why this directory

The local organic food directory provides you with the farmer connections you need to source organic food locally. The product-based chart and number of farms show that local and organic is possible. We have compiled all this information to allow you to find the way to access local organic food that works best for you. Read more about the possibilities in our food strategy guide, Regain Control of Your Food Choices: Build Your Local Organic Food Strategy.

What About Eating Out?

Some area restaurants source from local organic farmers. Consult our Eat Out Local Organic Guide at www.cogwaterloo.ca/eatOrganic.php.

Stay Connected
